She was an extremely important person in my life, but I remember her without fondness. I remember her well when she was a child and as an adult (we were all young then). I do not remember her other than when she visited my home when I was a kid and during the year I spent in the hospital. I did not have that much contact with her family, and we only talked a couple of times. I loved her and I miss her. We did not get along that much, but she was a good person and she spent a long time working to make the world a better place. She is buried in Lausanne. I remember her in her twenties. She had lots of ideas and worked for these ideas. She wrote a book that changed the lives of many people. Today it is a bestseller that can be found in every book store in the world. I started reading it in the seventies. I read it first in German, later in French and now back in German again. This book has been on my mind from when I was a kid, well into my adult years. I remember it vaguely from my youth. I remember it in my twenties, my thirties and now in my forties. She was a person who had lots of ideas. She did more than anyone else. She gave life to many people. She gave meaning and purpose to life. She was an extremely important person in my life. We did not get along that much, but she was a good person. This memory of her is engraved in my mind and it will stay with me. I remember her when she was a child and as an adult. I remember her in her twenties, her thirties and now in her forties. These memories are hard to shake and her life will leave a mark in my memory. I do not have many memories of her other than when she visited my home when I was a kid and during the year I spent in the hospital. I did not have that much contact with her family, and we only talked a couple of
