Current Motion capture suit FIFA 22 motion capture suit features motion capture suits that are integrated directly into the player's skin, rather than being strapped on top of the player. This innovation and the resulting high level of control and precision will help players make more accurate shots, dribble with more control, and defend with more speed and efficiency. Alongside the extensive motion capture analysis and development, the FUT 22 motion capture system was implemented in the game with the newly developed player models. "The FIFA Ultimate Team & Skill Transfer Tool continues to improve with every new season of FIFA Ultimate Team," said Kirstine Kowalik, FIFA Ultimate Team Producer. "The new motion capture suits will help players in certain scenarios such as, improved accuracy on shots, dribbling, through balls, and ball control and touch." New FIFA 22 motion capture suit improvements Players who take part in the new FIFA 22 motion capture suit will be able to make better decisions on where to position the ball in the final third of the pitch, more accurately direct ball into the opposing penalty area, and create better shots and passes. The ball also has a more realistic weight, and players will be able to accurately control where on the pitch they receive the ball. The new suits allow players to identify the space in the field that is available to them, and then to take possession of the ball as soon as they have identified their possibilities. Players who have never played FIFA before will be able to pick up the new motion capture suit and feel a significant difference in both responsiveness and the sense of control. The detail that is added to the kits of players in motion capture suits helps players to become immersed in the match. Players will have the ability to run, dribble, shoot, and play passes with a precision that is not possible in real matches, but still with enough of a real feeling to make the experience feel realistic. The new FUT 22 motion capture suit introduces additional visual aids and animations that include: Ball movement prediction: when the ball is coming towards a player, they will be able to identify the space and then position themselves accordingly to prevent it from being controlled by the opposition. The cross-disciplinary team collaborated on a study that employed virtual reality to help improve prosthetic and assistive device fitting in visually impaired individuals. "This cross-disciplinary project represents an emerging technology that can benefit more people than just the scientists," said UAB Psychology Instructor Sharada Naudre. "The virtual reality approach will benefit our students, as well as other students, with their training in technical communication, pedagogy, interaction design, and the creation of virtual reality content." Naudre, who was collaborating with Cathy Murphy, Ph.D., from the University of Columbia's Department of Biomechanics & Movement Sciences, added that the project is significant as it will improve the technology's accessibility for use in rehabilitation as well as academia.
